

British Food: Worksheet

Look at the following pictures below (1-9) and match them with the corresponding names. If you are unsure, just check with a friend and guess.

1

6

2

7

3

8

4

9

5

British Food: Matching

Look at the names of food and try to match them with their corresponding explanation. Which food have you tried before? Which food would you like to try in the future?

i.

This dish is very popular in the UK and is usually eaten on a Sunday and includes meat (pork or beef) as well as a range of vegetables (broccoli, carrots, etc.). You will feel very full after this meal.

ii.

Although this dish seems to have quite a funny name, it is popular among Brits. People normally eat this dish at the pub and it is made with a Yorkshire Pudding batter, mixed with bangers and then put in the oven.

iii.

This is a very simple piece of food and is just made with cheese which is melted on a piece of toast. It's nice with a cup of tea.

iv.

This is a simple meal which is made with sausages and potatoes which are mashed. It is very popular and people tend to eat for dinner.

v.

This is a light meal and is usually eaten during lunch time or late afternoon. It includes a savoury and people tend to spread cream, butter and jam onto these 'scones'. There's always a pot of tea nearby as they can be rather dry to eat.

vi.

This is a popular dish which many think originated from India when in fact it originated from England. It is chicken in a spicy sauce with rice. Vegetables are included in it and most people eat it at an Indian restaurant.

vii.

A popular dish made with either minced lamb or beef, vegetables (carrots, peas or onions) and mashed potato on top. Some people also tend to put grated cheese on top of this pie before placing it into the oven to cook.

viii.

This can be quite a hearty meal for people who want some energy for a busy day. It is a nice breakfast and includes quite a selection of food such as bacon, sausages, eggs, mushrooms, tomatoes and baked beans and is then all fried.

ix.

Every Friday, people eat this type of fried seafood which is accompanied with chips which are also fried. People add mushy peas and mayonnaise to this dish.